Money : 125 in gold.

Equipment : Two sets of clothing, boots, a pair of gloves, belt, bedroll, backpack, two large sacks, two small sacks, a water skin, and a tinder box.

Family : An only child.

Disposition : A lackey to Lord Malik. Even though he is superior to Lord Malik in most ways, he believes Lord Malik is an unbeatable, almost godlike person. He would do anything to please him. He learned to speak and write the Western language to be more like him. The only way this would change is if Lord Malik was beaten in single combat by another warrior. If this were to happen, his reaction would be unpredictable. He could deny the incident ever happened, start worshipping the victor, come to the realization that Lord Malik is just human and go off on his own, or something else. There is a rumor that there is something more between the two than just friendship, but there is no proof to confirm this rumor.
